Invasion of Pioche Proves an Ovation

The Pittman party was at Pioche Saturday night and received a welcome that proved a veritable ovation. After remarks had been made by Ed Caine, Judge Sanders and William Kennett, Senator Pittman delivered a prepared speech and at its conclusion and after he had sat down there were such vociferous calls that he was compelled to respond with another talk of several minutes' duration. Dispatches state that it was the most enthusiastic political meeting ever held in Lincoln county and assures Lincoln county to the Democrats by a big majority the coming election.

Tonight the party will arrive at and hold a meeting at Goodsprings, Clark county. It is expected they will reach Carson and hold a meeting in this city some time early next week.

Germans Drifting Back to Wilson

A dispatch dated St. Louis, October 12th, to the New York World, says:

"German-American leaders of South St. Louis highly approved today Senator James A. Red's address at the Tower Grove Turnverein, Grand Avenue and Junita street, last night. Paul O. Summer, an officer of the alliance, said:

"The speech of Senator Reed was a great and wonderful one. It won many friends for President Wilson."

"Other German leaders concurred in this opinion. "That Colonel Roosevelt figures largely in the transfer of Republican and Progressive votes to Wilson is asserted in the St. Louis Times, German-Republican afternoon daily, which is taking a straw vote. The Times says that the following letter from a real estate dealer on Chestnut street is characteristic of a large number of the straw voters:

"I voted for Taft four years ago but will vote for Wilson on November 7th. My sole reason for changing may be stated in one word. 'Roosevelt.' I believe he will be the power behind the throne if Hughes is elected and that he will be a menace to the good German-Americans of the United States. Wilson is not so bad. At least, we know where he stands toward us, but we never know where to find Mr. Hughes. Why don't he come out for or against us?"

Speakers Fail to Make Impression

that would end the present problem. He said nothing, though, of the cost of lives in the undertaking; it mattered not how many homes it would desolate, how many widows and orphans it would create; following Republican practice, material gains were sought, the penalty need not be considered. Senator Morchouse talked at length on the child-labor law, and while he did not attempt to discredit the Democratic administration for having passed it, he claimed the measure was of Republican origin and Republican votes were necessary to pass it during the late session of congress. He forgot to state, however, that the measure came up several times for action between the years 1896 and 1912, when the Republicans had absolute control of all the government departments and could have made it a law had their leaders acquiesced.

The senator, considering the fact that he had no base on which to build his premises, made a fairly good talk, and interested his audience throughout. The crowd stayed until the end, but it is safe to say that neither Miss Marshall nor Senator Morchouse made any converts to the Republican cause.
